

The Department of Sociology at the University of Memphis invites applications for a one-year Instructor position starting in August, 2011. The position will have the possibility of renewal for additional years. Responsibilities include teaching five undergraduate courses/sections per semester in various subject areas covered by the department. A Master's degree in sociology and teaching experience are required. Applications must be made on-line at <https://workforum.memphis.edu> . Applicants must upload a letter of application, a curriculum vita, a statement describing teaching interests and experience, evaluations of past teaching, and contact information for two professional references. Preference will be given to applicants who can convincingly demonstrate they are capable of successfully teaching five, large enrollment college-level courses/sections per semester. Address all enquiries to: Martin Levin, Chair, Department of Sociology, University of Memphis, Clement Hall 231, Memphis, TN 38152. Screening will begin on March 23rd and may continue until the position is filled. The University of Memphis is an Equal Opportunity/Affirmative Action Employer and we strongly encourage applicants from women and members of minority groups.